René August

Local Church Small Group Resource

This resource is designed to help your small group discussion. It's shaped to inspire you to consider new ways for understanding the mission of the church. Questions are organized in themes. Consider choosing the themes appropriate to your small group context. You don't need to cover all the questions. Allow for a time of response.

Small Group Preparation:

- Video: Renée August, 34 minutes.
- Scripture: 1 Corinthians 12:1-31
- Participants are encouraged to bring their own journals or writing materials.

Themes explored in the video:

- African Conversations; storytelling.
- Culture, society and the church.
- Lessons from the African church.

Beginning the conversation

Consider the questions suggested below to start the conversation for your small group. They'll consolidate the content of the video, after you've viewed it.

1. What were the major themes in René's responses?
2. How does René draw on African concepts for her theological perspectives? What terms did she use?
3. Discuss the difficulties of the content. What was difficult to understand? Was there anything you would like to clarify with the group?
4. Theological method: How is René's theology informed and shaped by her background and personal ministry? What approaches does she take in understanding God in the context of her context and ministry?

Going deeper

Explore the major themes raised in the video. Critically engage with René's theology. Consider the questions that respond to the issues raised in your preliminary discussion.

1. African conversations: Define the term and describe the concept of "Ubuntu". What is René's understanding of "Ubuntu" and how does she use the term to understand biblical truths?
2. African conversations: Discuss the difficulties of defining "Ubuntu". How is this a useful theological term and truth, expounded in Scripture? How is "Ubuntu" an interpretation of 1 Corinthians 12:1-31?
3. African conversations: How does "Ubuntu" as a concept facilitate a more comprehensive picture of God? In what ways is "Ubuntu" a helpful theological lens?
4. African conversations: How did the African-initiated conversation Amahoro help to explore major modern contextual issues? How did viewing scripture through a different lens provide a fruitful and energizing experience for René?
5. African conversations: How did the discussed issues at Amahoro make way for various lenses of scripture? Refer to the following topics:
 - Climate change: reading Scripture through the lens of Christ, creation and community.
 - Conflict transformation: reading Scripture through the lens of reconciliation and pre-emptive peacemaking.
 - Power and politics: reading Scripture and framing questions as a way of engaging tribal stories.
 - Why is it that the blood of our tribe is thicker than the water of our baptism?: reading Scripture through the lens of tribal bonds.
 - Economics: reading Scripture through the lens of kingdom economics; land, labor and love as currencies of the kingdom.
6. African conversations - storytelling: How is Scripture the "story of God in relationship with God's people"? How is the way God chose to reveal God's heart to us through story? Why does this interest René?
7. African conversations - storytelling: How does René create spaces for conversations by drawing connections with stories?
8. Culture, society and the church: In what ways does René encourage leaders in the church to "lead in the manner that God has called them to lead"? What is she reflecting on? How does she encourage leaders?
9. Culture, society and the church: How should the church address the discrimination of women in congregations using theological language? How might gendered terms for God be problematic? How might they be patriarchal?
10. Culture, society and the church: How can God be referred to in functions as Creator, Sustainer and redeemer, without relying on gendered terminology? How does the masculine gendering of God give patriarchy superiority in subtle ways? What are the creative possibilities for language in the church, and how do they make way for deeper possibilities for relationship with God?
11. Culture, society and the church: "I challenge the church to tell and listen to more stories, to embrace holistic mission and to tackle race and gender discrimination in all its guises." Describe René's hope for the church. What aspects does she see as central to the church's mission?
12. Culture, society and the church: What is the mission of the church, according to René? How does she suggest the church should pursue "integral mission"? What is the 4-fold framework she uses from Genesis 3 to explain integral, holistic faith in Christ?
13. Culture, society and the church: How does "injustice threaten justice everywhere"? How does this draw on the language of 1 Corinthians 12:1-31?
14. Culture, society and the church: How does Jesus' resurrection "create life" and "enlarge the story to include others"? Describe René's passion for Christ's mission: "Dying for something is a motivator and encourage me not to be afraid of things that will cost my life because these are the things that give meaning and direction, shape and frame, to my life.”

15. Culture, society and the church: How does René discuss the differences between formative Western-reliant theology and theology from her own context?
16. Lessons from the African church: Discuss the pros and cons of the “explosive growth” of the church in Africa, as described by René. What has influenced this growth, and how does René reflect on this?
17. Lessons from the African church: How has social media and the Internet enabled the import of culture into various African contexts? Discuss the examples René uses.
18. Lessons from the African church: How are relationships within the church intended to be “relational”, not “transactional”? What are “relational” rather than “transactional” ways of being with one another?
19. Lessons from the African church: How is forgiveness and relationship “two necessary things”? How does “Ubuntu” involve everyone, and assume no exclusion of any race or gender? How does this liberate the churches way of relating, and characterize majority-world churches, according to René?
20. Lessons from the African church: How does community life forge an “agreed level of dependency on one another”? How does community life bring “shalom” in creative ways and illustrate community?
21. Lessons from the African church: Describe the “fruitful ministry” of working in ecumenical circles. How does René reflect on the way different denominations and faiths enrich her theology?
22. Lessons from the African church: In what ways does René describe that African elders have shaped her way of life?
23. Theology: How do South African creativity, expressiveness and relationality inspire René’s theology? What are the various influences that inform René’s theological perspective?

Informing theology

Ensure the discussion is specifically drawing on your local setting. Make sure the discussion is relevant to the lives of faith for your small group. Encourage relevant and thoughtful examples from each participant.

1. African conversations: How does the term “Ubuntu” translate in your own context and community? Is this a relevant and helpful term? Discuss its possibilities for community life.
2. African conversations: “I am because you are. We need each other. I can only be me when you are fully you.” Discuss the responsibility of “both sides to be fully present”. How does your small group ministry “look for the goodness in one another”? How valuable and encouraging is this to your ministry?
3. African conversations: “The source of injustice is that we forget that we belong to one another.” How does “Ubuntu” facilitate relational healing and being?
4. African conversations: How does reading 1 Corinthians 12:1-31 with the concept of “Ubuntu” resonate with your small group’s experiences of being apart of the body of Christ?
5. African conversations: How do local and particular interpretations of the text of Scripture provide “opportunities for conversation” in church communities? How do various interpretations of Scripture lead to local churches exploring the significance of God’s word in their own local contexts? How do alternate perspectives refresh you?
6. African conversations - storytelling: “Story-telling is a very African way of sharing faith and living out spirituality”. How central is storytelling to your ministry? How does it provide a common language and in what ways can your small groups and communities assist people with the language to “tell their stories”?
7. Culture, society and the church: In what ways do you encourage the leadership in your churches? How would you encourage faithful leadership and faithful leaders as a culture in the church?

8. Culture, society and the church: How should the church address injustices? Discuss the injustices in your small group contexts, and how you might engage with these struggles and serve your communities?
9. Culture, society and the church: “Something as simple as changing the gendered language for God would go a long way in to helping people think about God in a different way, so then seek for different expressions of God which invite women into the story.” Describe the possibilities of language. How are your small groups inspired to change our theological language?
10. Culture, society and the church: Explain this statement: “Sometimes it means men being quiet and getting out of the way!” Why does René encourage men to create opportunities for women to participate? What are the challenges for women in your churches, and how can your churches better address discrimination?
11. Culture, society and the church: “It becomes obvious that we need women to create a more comprehensive picture of who God is.” How does René suggest that addressing discrimination enriches theologies and doctrines? How does this perspective encourage you?
12. Culture, society and the church: What is your hope for the church? How would you describe the mission of the church? How is this mission outworked in your small groups, churches and ministries?
13. Culture, society and the church: How do Martin Luther’s words encourage René in her faith and practice? “Unless you have something to die for, you have nothing to live for.” In what ways does this encourage you?
14. Lessons from the African church: Describe your experiences of “relational” and “transactional” ways of being with one another. What do you hope for in your small groups and communities? How does Scripture example God’s relationality? How is this reinforced and reflected in 1 Corinthians 12:1-31?
15. Lessons from the African church: “So much of the theology that is fed to us comes from a minority world-view and works in particular contexts. In some ways, this has been problematic. We need to enlarge the conversation and create opportunities to see beyond what is being seen at the moment.” Describe the possibilities of “seeing beyond” in your own contexts. What are the minority and particular perspectives that inform your faith, and how does the African church model indigenous modes of theology?
16. Lessons from the African church: How does community life forge an “agreed level of dependency on one another”? How does community life bring “shalom” in creative ways and illustrate community?
17. Lessons from the African church: “My understanding about “calling” is that it is not just a calling from God about me, but a calling to someone or to a group. I can’t expect that my calling is unique in a particular way that doesn’t require you.” How does René understand the call of God differently to the western perspective? How does African culture resist individualistic and egocentric understandings through dependency, and how can this encourage the western church?
18. Lessons from the African church: How does René call us into the privilege of suffering in the context of human relationships? How does René’s life and faith involve and require others?
19. Theology: How do aspects of South African Christianity offer creative possibilities for your own?

Informing community

Facilitate the space for your group to respond to the discussion. You might consider this section as a personal time of written journal responses to the following questions.

1. What is God encouraging me, our small group and our community, to do?
2. In responses to the issues raised in the video, what are areas I want to ask for God’s correction, forgiveness and grace in.
3. How do I need God to minister to me and my community, for us to be in prayer for the African church and engage with the issues of our culture?

4. How can I gain a better understanding of God through one another's perspectives? What do we ask that God would do in our hearts, for greater responsiveness and more understanding and love?

Prayer

Spend time in prayer over what you've learnt.

Invite the ministry of the Holy Spirit to clarify, heal, and inspire change for your participants and communities.
